Studebaker National Foundation —

My name is Isabella Ernsberger and I spent my summer as an intern at the Studebaker National Museum. I am so grateful for this experience.

My supervisors at the museum did an amazing job assigning me work that spoke to my strengths and interests, while also giving me the opportunity to work with areas I hadn't had any experience in. Some of these assignments included making posts for social media, drafting newsletters, video editing, photography, mailings, and putting together materials for the Concours d'Elegance. I always felt like my ideas were valued and my creativity was encouraged within any work I was doing.

My summer with the Studebaker National Museum gave me a greater understanding of working within an organization, experience in social media marketing, and more knowledge about all types of software and applications. I am so grateful to the staff at the Museum for their warm welcome and guidance. And to the Studebaker National Foundation for making it possible for me to be compensated for the work I did for the museum this summer. I am so very grateful for this experience and the amazing people I got to work with.

Sincerely,

Isabella Ernsberger

Dear Studebaker National Foundation,

Hi! My name is Emily Weber, and I am a grad student living in South Bend, Indiana. I wanted to take the time to say thank you to the foundation for their continuous support of the Studebaker National Museum's internship program.

This internship has provided me with a great opportunity to learn about the inner workings of a great museum. I previously have never considered myself to be the most knowledgeable about the Studebaker company and its cars, but I know now so much about the illustrious history of Studebaker and the important role this company has played in making South Bend (my hometown) what it is today.

Thank you for affording me this great learning opportunity.
